The NFP sector is going through a time of extraordinary change, with the introduction of the NDIS just one, albeit significant, contributing factor. With such change comes significant opportunity along with some major challenges for directors and executives to manage.

This event offers an opportunity for NFP business leaders to discuss the latest trends and challenges facing the sector and hear from experienced local directors and executives about how they are navigating these changes.

Now in its 7th year, the NFP Governance and Performance Study is the most comprehensive source of information on the governance of NFPs in Australia. Phil Butler GAICD, AICD's NFP Sector Leader, will introduce the key themes emerging from the 2017 study and will be joined by a panel of local leading experts to discuss the board's role in setting and overseeing an organisation's culture, embedding the organisation's risk appetite and managing its reputational risk, adapting to the changing business environment, and building its financial strength to ensure ongoing sustainability.

SpeakerPhil Butler GAICD

Sector Leader,
Not-for-Profit, AICD

Based in Canberra, Phil is the Not-for-Profit Sector Leader for the AICD. This role aims to support organisations in the NFP sector to achieve their respective missions through ongoing improvements in governance and to build greater awareness of the contribution of NFP directors and support their ongoing professional development. Examples of this work include the Good Governance Principles and Guidance for NFP Organisations and the annual NFP Governance and Performance Study.

PanelistsNatalie Nelmes

Director, Geraldton
Universities Centre

Natalie became the Director of Geraldton Universities Centre in January 2015 after serving for five years as the Centre's Special Projects Manager. She holds a Masters in Management and an Arts degree and has more than 15 years experience in the marketing and PR industries. With Natalie's insights, GUC has taken a grass roots approach in establishing the first Not-for-Profit universities centre in Australia, forming partnerships with universities to provide supported distance education and being governed by a regionally based board committed to community outcomes.

Jennifer Allen

Director, Ngala
Community Services

As a Director, Jenny Allen has overseen the regional delivery of services from the merged Geraldton Regional Community Education Centre and Ngala Community Services since 2004, working alongside over 35 staff. Ngala Midwest and Gascoyne delivers a wide range of services across the region. Current services include parenting, early childhood and youth services, alternative education, counselling and support for Aboriginal families and communities.
